

Abstract

A surface reforming method of a metal product, wherein a platinum film is formed on the surface of a metal product by injecting onto that surface a nitrogen ion, a carbon ion and a platinum ion in that order, and then injected onto said platinum film a second platinum ion with the aim of improving the exfoliation resistance of the platinum film being formed on the metal surface, and the abrasion resistance of the surface

This Sheet Has Been Replaced

