

Abstract

A method for producing a medical simulator is described. A first foam component (15) of the medical simulator is additively manufactured. At 5 least one further foam component (16) of the medical simulator is additively manufactured. The foam components (15, 16) are manufactured so as to have different foam structures and/or from different materials. A medical simulator and a use of a medical simulator are also described.