

[ABSTRACT]

A software-testing device includes a conversion unit configured to convert a PLC program for operating a programmable logic controller into a general-purpose language program described in a general-purpose programming language, and a test
5 execution unit configured to perform a test on the general-purpose language program.