

ABSTRACT

A content display method and apparatus for generating an image, a device, a storage medium, and a computer program product. The method comprises: in response to a preset trigger operation of a user, displaying a preset description information determination page, wherein the description information determination page comprises a preset description information determination control; acquiring target description information determined by the user on the basis of the description information determination control, wherein the target description information comprises feature information used for generating a target image; and in response to an image generation operation triggered by the user, displaying a preset content display page, and displaying in the content display page at least one target image generated on the basis of the target description information.