(57) Abstract: Disclosed in the present description are a method and apparatus for executing a service, a storage medium and a device. The method comprises: displaying conditions used for constructing rules and evaluation indexes respectively corresponding to the conditions; in response to a selection operation of a user, determining, from conditions to be selected, a condition selected by the user; for each condition to be selected, determining a temporary rule according to the condition to be selected and the condition that the user has selected; respectively testing reasonableness of the temporary rules according to historical service data, determining, according to the reasonableness of the temporary rules, evaluation indexes respectively corresponding to the conditions to be selected, and displaying same; when the user determines to generate a rule, in response to a determination operation of the user, determining a target rule; and when a calling instruction for the target rule is received, executing a service according to the target rule and service data corresponding to the calling instruction. Users can be assisted in reasonably selecting conditions for constituting target rules, and abnormalities when executing services on the basis of the target rules can be reduced.
