ABSTRACT

A METHOD OF IDENTIFYING, ISOLATING AND/OR CULTURING FOETAL CELL(S)

There is provided a method of identifying at least one foetal erythroblast in a sample, the method comprising analysing the morphology of at least one cell in the sample; wherein at least one analysed cell that is nucleated, is CD45 negative and comprises a relatively high cytoplasmic to nuclear ratio is identified as the foetal erythroblast.

Figure 1