

ABSTRACT

COUPLING DEVICE

The invention relates to a coupling device for drill rods comprising a receiving socket for receiving a connecting portion of the drill rod. Provision is made for at least one locking device with a locking element, which is supported in an adjustable manner between a release position and a locking position, in which the locking element engages into a corresponding recess of the connecting portion.

Fig. 1