

ABSTRACT

Disclosed is a method of providing a dart game image, performed by a dart game device. The method includes: receiving second play-related data from a plurality of other devices; determining, based at least in part on the second play-related data, a display attribute for a second object related to the plurality of other devices; and displaying the second object, based on the determined display attribute. A representative figure is FIG. 13.