

ABSTRACT

This method for controlling a logistics robot operating within a predetermined operational boundary comprises the steps of: configuring area rules including movable directions for at least one area, which can be variably configured within the operational boundary; and configuring a movement path of the logistics robot between a departure point and a destination point of the logistics robot on the basis of the area rules.

Fig. 7