

[ABSTRACT]

To enhance the quickness and the efficiency of processing involved in collaboration between business systems of a financial institution, a hub system 100 of a business collaboration system 100 includes a communication apparatus 105 configured to execute communication processing with each channel and business systems of a financial institution; a storage apparatus 101 storing an allocation table 125 in which a mode of collaboration between business systems is defined by required quality of transaction processing in the financial institution; and a computation apparatus 104 configured to check predetermined information contained in a transaction message obtained from the channel or any of the business systems against the allocation table 125 and identify a mode of collaboration between business systems for corresponding transaction processing, issue a processing request for the transaction message to one or more of the business systems and acquire a processing result therefrom as a response to the request in accordance with definitions of collaborating targets and a sequence of collaboration indicated by the mode of collaboration, and execute processing of returning the processing result to the channel or the business system.