Abstract

A method for reporting interference information is performed by a terminal, and includes: determining that a condition for sending the interference information is met; and sending the interference information to a network device. The interference information includes information of a frequency range related to a frequency interference problem.

FIG.1