

SCRIPT MARKUP

ABSTRACT

A script markup language provides a declarative mechanism for defining script based on interactive behavior and application logic associated with a document. The script markup defining the interactive behavior and application logic is presented as an independent portion of the markup for the document, separated from any markup concerning the content and presentation of the document.

FIGURE 2