

ABSTRACT

The invention discloses a method for increasing the rate of combustion in an internal combustion engine through the thermal ionisation of a pyro-electric crystalline stone or steel balls with sharp edges, or a combination of both to promote more complete combustions, decreased quantities of noxious emissions and greater fuel efficiency.