

Method and System for Stabilising a Signal

ABSTRACT

A method and system for stabilising a signal are described. Stabilisation of the signal includes receiving an input signal and generating a plurality of delayed signals based on the input signal. A segment of the input signal is compared with a segment of each of the delayed signals and an error signal is generated based on the comparison. Signal period adjustment is performed based on the error signal.

[Figure 1]

162162

G00002