

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

MEASUREMENT OF FOCAL POINTS AND OTHER FEATURES IN OPTICAL SYSTEMS

Identifying a location of a focal point of an optical system includes, in some implementations, using a sensor system to detect light that passed through the optical system, and determining a location of a focal point of the optical system based on a location of a focal point of the sensor system that substantially matches the location of the focal point of the optical system.

Fig. 7