

ABSTRACTStratified and agglomerated artificial stone articles

5 The present invention relates to articles of the type that comprise an agglomerate of artificial stone and polymerisable resin, such as tiles or slabs, to be used as a construction material, characterised in that they comprise various large strati or veins having a heterogeneous variable mass, which provide a specific aesthetic appearance similar to natural stone products.

Figure 1