

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to a porous electrode that can be used in electrical energy storage or production devices, such as a lithium-ion battery. This porous electrode is a porous
5 layer comprising at least one electrode active material P and an oxide electronic conductor material.