Programming Interface for a Computer Platform

ABSTRACT

A programming interface provides functions for generating applications, documents, media presentations and other content. These functions allow developers to obtain services from an operating system, object model service, or other system or service.