ABSTRACT

An information transmission method and apparatus are disclosed. A first UE receives network information that is respectively sent by one or more second UEs and is associated with a network state of each second UE; sends the network information to a base station; and receives first indication information from the base station. The first indication information indicates at least one second UE in the one or more second UEs to operate in a first working state.

Figure 3