Representatives, however, are not isolated from the community, and are not immune from the same criticisms that are leveled against the community. The community is not a monolith, and the representatives are not a monolith. The community is made up of many different groups, and the representatives are made up of many different groups. The community is not a single entity, and the representatives are not a single entity. The community is a collection of individuals, and the representatives are a collection of individuals. The community is not a single entity, and the representatives are not a single entity. The community is a collection of individuals, and the representatives are a collection of individuals.
