

ABSTRACT

5 The present invention relates to a method for the degradation of gliadin in flour for bread making, by means of a step of mixing the flour with water, at least one step of performing enzymatic hydrolysis, at least one step of fermenting using microorganisms in controlled-pH conditions, and a step of drying to obtain a gliadin-free flour.