Abstract

The object of this invention is to provide an electromagnetic relay whose core and yoke could be securely attached to the base with a high degree of precision so that the operating characteristics of the relay would not vary.

In this invention, two bosses are provided which are symmetrical with respect to center line near the lower edge on the inner surface of hole in spool.

This Sheet Has Been Replaced

