

Abstract

The invention relates to a data storage medium having a semiconductor chip which has at least one memory in which an operating program is stored which contains a number of commands, with each command producing signals which can be detected from outside the semiconductor chip. According to the invention, the data storage medium is designed such that data which is used more than once for a calculation process is scrambled using different functions.

162162

G00002