

ABSTRACT

This invention relates to computing and, in particular, to cross-border purchase processing systems. This invention comprises a digital coupon that is a digital entity (e.g., an electronic document) that grants the right to receive the product or service represented by such coupon that is generated by the issuer and presented to the partner. The technical outcome of the proposed invention is to increase effectiveness and security of processing cross-border digital coupon data and transactions subject to the legislation.

Fig. 1