ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A game system includes a main controller that operates to: control the main display to display an image for providing the game; store a number of game medium as a deposit game medium count, the number of game medium being a predetermined proportion of a total number of the game medium input into each of the game medium input unit provided in the player terminals; store a plurality of game conditions that define different conditions for playing the game; select one from among the stored game conditions in accordance with a number of the deposit game medium count; provide the game to the players under the selected game condition; and provide an award to a player who wins the game.