ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to a method for producing microparticles containing a poorly soluble drug, and microparticles produced by the method. According to the method for preparing microparticles, it is possible to produce microparticles that are uniform and of good quality and have high encapsulation efficiency for the poorly soluble drug and low contents of residual organic solvents, by using at least two organic solvents.

No Figure