Abstract

This patent application relates to a data carrier with an optically variable element. The optically variable element consists of a first structured print which is overlaid with a second print at least in partial areas. The second print is applied to a document with an ink which contains an optically variable pigment having no, or only slight, body color of its own.