

ABSTRACT

A memory device includes a contact, and a plurality of support structures disposed around the contact, wherein each of the support structures is formed utilizing a plurality of overlapping
5 holes. The support structures include an insulating layer disposed within the overlapping holes. The support structures are formed by expanding and overlapping a plurality of first openings.

FIG. 3A