ABSTRACT

A method of inhibiting foaming in a seawater cooling water system, characterized in that a higher aliphatic tertiary amine is added to the seawater cooling water system to which a chlorine-generating agent is added, so that the foaming is inhibited in the seawater cooling water system.