

ABSTRACT

Provided in the embodiments of the present disclosure is a method for generating a picture set. The method comprises: in response to a trigger operation of a user for a template identifier associated with a first picture set, displaying a picture preview page, wherein the first picture set is associated with a picture set template, and at least some text materials among text materials comprised in the picture set template are displayed in a specified region of the picture preview page; in response to the determination of the user for at least one picture, displaying the at least one picture in the specified region, wherein the at least some of the text materials are displayed on a corresponding picture among the at least one picture in a superimposed manner; and in response to a generation operation, generating a second picture set on the basis of the at least one picture determined by the user and the text materials.