ABSTRACT

STRUCTURE OF RING

A ring implementing connection without changing its shape has a body made by bending a bar to make both ends face each other and an entrance portion at both ends of the body formed with a small gap between the entrance portions facing each other to push two rings through the gap of each ring to be connected each other.

Figure 3