(54) Title: A GAME FOR LEARNING FOREIGN LANGUAGES

(57) Abstract

The present invention relates to a game and relates particularly, though not exclusively to a board game using a foreign language, such as bahasa Indonesian, and a national language such as the English language. In one embodiment of the invention there is provided a board game (10) comprising a game box (12) and a playing board (13). The game box (12) includes decks of keywords/phrase cards (26), instruction/conversation starter cards (28), and conversation starter cards (24). The game box (12) also includes a set of playing markers which are used by each player to move around the playing board (13). An advance wheel (32) is also provided as a random number generating device for determining the number of spaces a player is to move around the board (13). The playing board (13) has drawings/photographs together with instructions in bahasa Indonesian located in one or more spaces defining a first or second track (42), (44), respectively, positioned around the playing board (13). Each of the cards used in playing the game has a word, phrase, or instruction located on one surface in a foreign language, such as bahasa Indonesian, and on an opposite surface a translation of the word, phrase, or instruction in a national language, such as the English language. The game is played by one or more players conversing in the foreign language using instructions, keywords/phrases, and/or conversation starters provided on the playing board or on one or more cards. Reference can be made to the reverse side of each card which contains an English translation of the foreign language for assisting the player in conversing in the foreign language. A foreign language can thus be learnt and developed in a fun and entertaining way.
