[ABSTRACT]

The present invention relates to a remote pre-visualization system using virtual production virtual camera and lighting, and more particularly, to a remote pre-visualization system using virtual production virtual camera and lighting, which is constructed such that, before LED wall-based driving footage is filmed in an on-site studio, an effect of a camera moving shot can be confirmed in advance, thereby providing a more creative and efficient working environment during actual filming.