Abstract

Surface acoustic wave arrangement having at least two surface acoustic wave structures.

In order to reduce scattering losses during the transmission of a surface acoustic wave signal, the invention proposes that the junction between two mutually offset surface acoustic wave structures be designed such that the finger period is reduced in the region of the junction, and such that the finger period varies continuously in the region of the junction.
Figure 3