

Abstract

Protective vest, in particular a tactical bib or vest, a plate carrier vest or a bulletproof vest

The present invention relates to an assembly forming a protective vest, firstly 5 comprising a basic vest having, in the worn state, an outer front face (100) intended to cover the front, in particular the thorax and the abdomen, of the vest wearer, and an outer rear face (700) intended to cover the back of the vest wearer, the two front and rear faces being connected to each other from above at the level of the shoulders, and laterally so as to define between them a passage for the head and 10 two passages for the arms, and secondly comprising at least one panel (30; 40) having an outer face and an inner face, characterised in that means (16, 18, 19, 20) for removably attaching the at least one panel to the outer front face or to the outer rear face of the vest are provided such that, when the at least one panel is attached to the vest, it substantially covers the entire outer front face or the entire outer rear 15 face of the vest, and the at least one panel can be detached from the vest in the worn state.

Figures for the abstract: Fig. 6