

Method for correcting errors in packet data

Abstract

To correct errors in packet data, particularly DAB data packets, where code words are used over a plurality of data packets, it is proposed that redundancy information for correcting errors be added while retaining the original packet data structure, specifically at the cost of a free data field or useful data field. The cycle of error protection is chosen as a multiple of a minimum size for a packet length.

(Figure 3)