

ABSTRACT

UPPER BODY OF GARMENT

5 An upper body of a garment prevents a wearer from moving a shoulder forward to put an arm in front of the trunk. The upper body (1) of the garment has a body (2) with a left sleeve (3) and a right sleeve (4). The body includes a rear body (12) with a left armhole (18) on the left side and a right armhole (19) on the right side. A portion between the armholes exerts a tensile force to pull the shoulder blades of a wearer horizontally inward. The left sleeve includes a rear surface
10 (62) with a left sewn portion sewn (132) to the left armhole. The left sewn portion is narrower in horizontal width than the deepest portion (85) of the left armhole before a rear surface (68) of an upper end of the left sleeve is sewed to the left armhole. The right sleeve is similar.

[Selected drawing] FIG. 2