

ABSTRACT

A semiconductor device comprises a peripheral circuit region provided on a first substrate and including circuit devices and a contact plug extending on the first substrate in a vertical direction; a memory cell region provided on a second substrate disposed above the first substrate and including memory cells; and a through insulating region penetrating through the second substrate on the contact plug and covering an upper surface of the contact plug.

FIG. 1