

in a directional forced air stream; a containment structure having a surface adapted to catch contaminants, positioned adjacent to said vent; said containment structure so positioned, defining a tortuous path for air exhausting from said sanitizing chamber and providing means to prevent solid or liquid of said contaminants from entering a lower portion of said sanitizing chamber below said containment structure; and said air exhausting said vent providing means to prevent said contaminants from entering into said sanitizing chamber through said vent.