

Abstract

Ceramic materials are brittle and therefore not generally suitable for dynamic stresses, in particular caused by vibrations and impacts. The invention therefore proposes a material composed of a large fraction of aluminium oxide together with zirconium oxide and strontium aluminate.