

ABSTRACT

A transvaginal tube adapted for insertion into the vaginal tract of a patient, the tube having a diameter greater than the patients cervix opening and having a distal end and a proximal end, the proximal end being cut in a plane non-normal to the tubular axis and being adapted to define the patient's cervico-vaginal junction.