ABSTRACT

The present application relates to a self-tonometry device for measuring intra-ocular pressure (IOP) in an eye of a subject. The self-tonometry device includes an array of a plurality of sensors, a powered force mechanism and a processor for executing a machine learning module. Methods of using the self-tonometry device are also disclosed.

FIG. 1