

Abstract

a cooling container is presented, which includes a thermally insulating container comprising a storage space, and a radiative cooling portion comprising an internal surface and an external surface. The internal surface faces the storage space and the external surface is exposed to an outside of the cooling container. The radiative cooling portion is configured to dissipate heat from the storage space by emitting a thermal radiation to the outside via the external surface.