ABSTRACT

The invention relates to an X-ray contrast medium comprising an X-ray contrast substance coated with a polymer which adheres to the surface of a gastrointestinal mucosa under acid conditions and separates from the surface of the gastrointestinal mucosa under neutral or alkaline conditions. The X-ray contrast medium has excellent adhesiveness to a digestive tract, so that its doses and concentration can be reduced.