(57) Abstract: The present invention relates to a restocking method, a device, a computer apparatus, and a storage medium. The method comprises: receiving a restocking order, and determining a mapping relationship between product information of a restocking product in the restocking order and a product space on a sorting wall, the mapping relationship indicating that a target restocking product is to be correspondingly placed in a target product space on the sorting wall; and determining a target storage box corresponding to the target restocking product to be placed in the target product space on the sorting wall, the target storage box being used to store the target restocking product. The method improves the restocking efficiency.
