

Abstract

The invention relates to a method for operating a lithium battery, selected from solid or quasi-solid electrolyte lithium batteries, said lithium battery comprising 5 at least one positive electrode, at least one solid or quasi-solid electrolyte, and at least one negative electrode, said method being characterized in that the charging and discharging temperatures are modulated so as to obtain a battery with improved cycling performance.