

Abstract

The present invention relates to a massage device comprising: a body massage unit which massages the back or thigh of a user and includes a receiving portion of a leg massage unit for receiving the leg massage unit; a full-length box which supports the body massage unit and includes a power supply unit and a control unit; and the leg massage unit which massages the legs of the user and rotates around a rotary shaft with respect to the body massage unit, wherein the receiving portion of the leg massage unit includes a first detection sensor, wherein the first detection sensor is arranged toward the leg massage unit and detects whether there is an object in the receiving portion of the leg massage unit, the leg massage unit includes a posture sensor for measuring an angle between the leg massage unit and a seat portion, and the control unit controls the operations of the body massage unit and the leg massage unit.