

ABSTRACT

A portable electronic device according to an embodiment includes a processor that executes a first process according to a command received from an external device. The processor determines whether a disabling condition is satisfied by using command reception as a trigger, executes a disabling process of disabling a predetermined function of a second process different from the first process and then executes the first process when the disabling condition is satisfied, and executes the first process without executing the disabling process when first date data does not exceed second date data.