ABSTRACT

A probe is inserted into a through-hole in a guide plate and used for inspecting electrical characteristics of an inspection object, and the probe includes: a columnar conductor; and a plurality of insulating coating materials arranged spaced apart from each other on a surface of the conductor along a central axis direction of the conductor.

FIG. 1