

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method of controlling a memory device including a temperature sensor includes sensing a temperature of the memory device and extracting an extracted temperature for controlling the memory device using the sensed temperature, storing the extracted temperature in the memory device, calculating an estimated temperature at a current time point using the extracted temperature and a plurality of past extracted temperatures stored in the memory device, and controlling the memory device using the estimated temperature.

FIG. 6